Team Actions & Commitments

• Every item that leaves the ELT table leaves with three things: an owner, a date it comes back to the table, and a short note of the team's shared view (including where views still differ). Capture this in the ELT minutes.

• If a decision or action agreed at ELT changes after it leaves the table (e.g., a postponement or a change of direction), it comes back to ELT rather than being updated by email or side conversation.

• Cultivator: runs at steady state for 2027 (Garnet). The future-state conversation (what it becomes, and what Conexus's relationship to it is) needs a named lead, an initial scoping/sizing conversation, and a return date to ELT in late winter (~February) so the team can align before bringing the board along at the 2nd or 3rd board meeting of 2027. Lead to be confirmed.

• Work back from the four board meetings to shape the ELT work plan. Start the December board package now (budget, balanced scorecard, member rewards, ICAP, top 10 risks) so it is not landing in late November; decide which board items need full ELT coordination and which can be handled from the expert seat.

• Create a "sensing the system" rhythm: a standing slot on the ELT agenda for external developments, plus an off-cycle option (30-minute virtual stand-up or Teams thread) when something material can't wait two weeks. Use a simple triage: Is it a risk? How big? Can we avoid it? How do we mitigate? What do we communicate?

• Libro/True merger: brief the board (via Celina/chair) that the ELT has reviewed it and it does not change the current strategy; Mark to track the speed of the federalization as a marker for future planning; consider a future scenario session.

• Revive an enterprise "big rocks" portfolio view that ELT members are invited into; layer lead, board role and timing onto the three-year prioritization work Peter is guiding (and confirm whether Cultivator belongs on it).

• Treat pace/sequencing and capacity as ELT-owned questions. Before saying yes to new work, have the capacity conversation (build, buy, borrow, phase, defer or say no), and agree how collisions in timing get surfaced.

• Bring the labour cost / FTE efficiency question to ELT as an enterprise conversation, planned ahead rather than reactive to board pressure.

• Shared AI repository for ELT minutes, agendas and pre-reads is still outstanding – Candice to action, with support from IT (Copilot).

• Jeremy and Theresa to work on moving specific senior leader teams toward a more enterprise-wide, collective view.

• Simon to circulate a draft team agreement (below) for review. Next session ~November 10: go deeper on timing and capacity.

How We Work Together

•Move from "draft" to "staging" – with lead time. Stage ideas at whatever level of completion fits: "I'm thinking about this," "here's my best thinking so far," or "a decision is coming." The ask is "pressure-test this," not "approve this." Build in a realistic runway before input or sign-off is needed.

•Surface blind spots – into the enterprise arena. Share information early, even when it's not perfect ("something material just happened; I haven't figured it out yet"). Ask directly: "What am I not seeing from your seat?" Surfacing blind spots is the shared responsibility of the owner and the team. Time-box early/speculative discussions.

•It's OK to socialize 1:1 before releasing the first draft. Be transparent that you've done it ("I've tested this with Neil and Garnet"), and don't let pre-socializing delay the draft to the point where the rest of the team arrives with no room to engage.

•Frame the decision up front – "mine" or "ours"? State early whether this is yours to decide or the team's, and what you need from ELT (information, input, pressure-test, decision). Name it out loud if you think something is "ours, not mine." When in doubt, the tie goes to ELT.

•Pace + timing – apply a "no" filter and check capacity. Before committing, ask: Do we have the capacity? What drops if we say yes? Can we phase it, buy capacity, or defer it? Kill ideas early if they don't fit strategy, capacity or board appetite.

•Clarity on accountability. Be clear from the outset who is leading the work, even when it is "ours."

•Clarity with the sponsor – timing and next steps. When work leaves the table: who is sponsoring it, when does it come back, and what is the next step? If it changes along the way, it comes back.

•Share information across the ELT – transparency. There is nothing I would say to someone on your team that I wouldn't say to you. If I reach into your team, I close the loop with you – ideally before they do. Signpost clearly when you're "just thinking out loud," because anything an ELT member says tends to be heard as direction. Never reach in to work around a disagreement with a peer. Make time for each other.

Also raised in the room

•Partners, not stakeholders – offering help across functions is normal and welcome (e.g., the branch closure).

•Misses will happen – call them out without blame; if a miss becomes a pattern, have the direct conversation.

•Buy-in is not consensus – ELT is for input and alignment; once heard, we support the decision as ours.

•Give each other grace – progress, not perfection.

•What belongs at the table: extraordinary items going to the board; anything new or cutting across several areas; a pivot from a standard submission. Routine, annually repeated items stay out unless policy requires them.
